SUPERINTENDENT'S SCHOOL REPORT.

Education is the bulwark of a nation, the very means to its culture, power, and efficiency.

Teaching is not giving information but a process of awakening thought, and in making conditions favorable for one's development. The best teachers plan the lesson around a centre of interest.

A good teacher is in truth a person whose influence is never ended. To make a life, as well as to make a living, is one of the supreme objects for which we must all struggle.

Teachers must remember that moral training must not be confined to the schoolroom; it should reach into the street, and even into the homes, so that teachers and parents may work together for the good of the children.

The school tax is the only money that deals with mind and heart, with the human soul. The money put into brain-development and character-forming is an investment, and not an expense. But taxes alone never make good schools. Money is lifeless until someone breathes into it the breath of life. But money can be made emphatic and prophetic when it is accompanied by the intelligent and conscientious service of the school directors. No class of men have done the country a greater service than the long-suffering, devoted school trustees.

But above all else, above and beneath all else, is the public spirit which heartens the teacher, gives confidence to the school board, and makes generosity in tax voting a sacred privilege.

We must all agree that the purpose of all education is to train for right living. It is not sufficient to develop a boy's mental powers, but we must at the same time help him to correct those faults that will hinder his advancement, and to develop those qualities that will help him to win an honorable success.

The true education develops the whole of the pupil's powers, gives him mastery over himself, makes him able to do, and at the same time builds a deep, broad foundation.

An eminent business man once said, "that a grammar school education adds fifty per cent to the worth of a man; a high school one hundred per cent." Every addition to true knowledge is an addition to human power.

Character—a high, noble, true manhood, grounded and rooted in love of the truth, justice, and human sympathy; this must be made the supreme object and aim of twentieth century education.

If we set a proper value on those who contribute to the prosperity of the state, we ought to place in the front rank those who teach the children, whose labors influence posterity, and on whose precepts and exertions the welfare of our country in a great measure depends.

Our schools in the past year have done good work, and we feel they are keeping up with the spirit of the times.

The moral effect of a good school is wonderful. There is no nagging or scolding in the school. Both teachers and pupils seem, and are, happy. The spirit of work required in all our schools, and better almost than the spirit of work, but the direct result of it, was the cheerful obedience to authority which rendered the stern discipline unnecessary. There has been little keeping after school for work or discipline. At the close of the day's session the children in the school should go home free from worry and nervous strain.

We have held four teachers' meetings this year, and they have been very helpful to the teachers, who have not only exerted themselves to attend, but have written papers and prepared themselves for discussions on the various subjects taught. They attended the State Association held in Rutland, and came home with many new thoughts, and a deeper inspiration for nobler and better work. Such educational gatherings are indispensable for progress in their work.

We still urge the necessity of the parents visiting the schools, that they, and the committee we appoint, may become more interested in our schools and see the good work done there. Let the pupils see that you are interested in them, and the teachers that you are in sympathy with their noble efforts.

We have given some time to drawing and nature study, and to me, it seems that nature study lightens, rather than increases, the work of the children, acts as a stimulus stirring the enthusiasm of the child which would otherwise lie dormant. Education for efficiency must especially endeavor to induce young people to think.

The teacher cannot prove his love for his pupils, and his work, in a better or nobler way, than by securing through some means, a large collection of books for his school. Pupils should be taught to acquire the taste for the best in literature. Of course the place above all others for instilling this love of good literature is the home; and fortunate indeed is that person who from childhood has been in the atmosphere of real refinement and culture which is found in the homes where the best authors are read and loved. But to most pupils, the teacher may have the great privilege of introducing for the first time the masters of literature. One of the best means to help them to develop beauty, strength and purity of character is through cultivation of good reading.

The object of education is not so much to give a certain amount of knowledge, as to awaken the faculties, and give the pupil the use of his own mind. No child will make a good citizen who does not come to appreciate that both good manners and good morals make for one's best peace, comfort, and thrift.

To make good, moral, industrious, self-supporting, patriotic American citizens is the work undertaken by the public schools.

The obligations of the teacher are not fulfilled by six hours in the school room, if there is one pupil whom she has failed to reach for his uplifting, and any service remains undone by which she might be the means of his salvation. There should be no shrinking from contact with the home. Frequently this is the one thing needed for success. Let our lives show that we are more concerned to see good results for the effort we put forth, than to receive money for so many hours of existence. Then and only then will we have done our part toward solving the great question of the day.

Long terms of service are greatly to the advantage of both school and teacher. It is wise for boards of education to pay their desirable teachers considerably more than would be demanded by equally good new ones. It is equally wise for teachers in pleasant positions to refuse to change to other equally desirable locations, except for a considerable increase in salary.

I believe the custom of setting aside one day in each year for the teachers to visit other rooms, is an excellent one. Time spent in visiting other schools is far from being wasted. When school people have interest enough to visit, you will find they are progressive.

The thoughtful teacher must ever keep his face toward the future, remembering that often without his knowledge, his acts, words, and ideas are influencing his pupils. The mightiest forces in life are the silent ones.

The school gives the state its character, multiplies the efficiency of the pupils, and creates wealth, by increasing wisdom.

To America the world is looking as never before in its history, and in America, the world will find the keen eye, the trained intellect, and the sympathetic heart, which will successfully guide the nations of the earth toward that eternal Truth which shall make all men free.

Respectfully submitted,

ELIZA A. HUNTOON, Superintendent.

Health Officer's Report.

Wallingford, Feb. 6th, 1905.

All of the schools and public buildings have been inspected as directed by law, and the sanitary condition of each school house is very good. The Health Officer found the water closets at Centerville and the Sweetland districts in a deplorable condition. Some of the seats occupied by the small scholars are too high for their comfort and ease.

All other buildings are found in a good sanitary condition. The water supply, with the exception of the Village school ought to be better.

The town has been very free from contagious diseases, until recently. Mumps has prevailed in the village quite extensively this winter.

Number of cases of mumps reported, fifteen.

Chicken-pox, six; erysipelas, two.

Deaths reported to me, 32. And births to the town clerk.
